EJPS: European Journal of Policing Studies

The European Journal of Policing Studies (EJPS) will be published quarterly from September 2013. EJPS is a peer-reviewed journal that publishes articles addressing the topic of policing and police studies in the broad sense. EJPS aims to provide insights into contemporary policing discussion.

It focuses on issues that are of interest to the police and other actors in policing, and that shape (the future of) policing.

With its primary aim of disclosing European research into, views on and analyses of policing to the international community, EJPS wants to reach both policing researchers and practitioners. In its ambition to help overcome the language barrier, EJPS aims to disclose research from countries which often remain out of sight in publications and also applauds international comparative research.

The Journal concentrates on contributions from European countries, but contributions from other countries are also welcomed, if they provide added value for the European context. EJPS aspires to have an international reach and the editors aim for inclusion in the Thomson Reuters database (Web of Science). It is published four times a year. EJPS offers quick but thorough review procedures through the expert guidance of an international editorial board.

The Journal now has an open call for papers! Authors are invited to submit papers on topical discussions on policing, a state of affairs with regard to policing issues in specific regions, or on recent (empirical) research.
